SKIN RESURFACING / MICRONEEDLING PEN

The main difference between radiofrequency microneedling and a microneedling pen is that radiofrequency microneedling uses radiofrequency energy alongside the tiny needles to penetrate deeper into the skin and stimulate collagen production more effectively, resulting in potentially better results for deeper wrinkles, scars, and skin tightening, while a standard microneedling pen uses the needles to create micro-channels in the skin for generally considered milder concerns like fine lines and surface texture issues. Due to the deeper penetration, RF microneedling may have a slightly longer recovery time with more redness and swelling compared to a standard microneedling pen. Both are great options to achieving your goals!

Areas/Reasons for Treatment Include: fine lines and wrinkles*, acne scarring*, active acne, rosacea, pigmentation from aging and the sun, atrophic scars, stretch marks, hypertrophic or keloid scars.

*Ask us about using Exosomes with your treatment! This innovative treatment combines the rejuvenating power of exosomes with the effectiveness of microneedling, offering long-lasting and significant improvements in skin quality.
